

Ramana, M. V., 2003b, "Climate change and developing countries," The Daily Times, December 18.

Developing countries have rightly stressed their lower emission levels of greenhouse gases and have demanded equity in using the biosphere as a sink. But it is also prudent and wise for them to use the reduction of GHG emissions as a consideration, though not the sole one, in deciding energy and land use policy.